

EMPLOYEE ACKNOWLEDGMENT & ATTESTATION

Staff Training: "We Teach. We Coach. We Support."

ILS Scope of Service & Workers' Compensation (California)

Agency:

Employee name (print): Position:

Trainer:

Date of training I attended (write in):

Training Topics Presented

Topic	What was covered
Why this training	Training objectives: know the ILS role, the absolute rules, how to decline out-of-scope requests, and how to report a work injury.
What ILS is: our role	The golden rule — "Do WITH, never FOR." Teaching and coaching independence: cooking, budgeting, housekeeping routines, transit and mobility training, medical-appointment skills, self-advocacy, and connecting clients to resources such as IHSS.
What ILS is NOT	We are not caregivers. Personal/attendant care (lifting, transferring, bathing, dressing, toileting, feeding) belongs to different workers — IHSS providers, PCAs, CNAs, home health — with different training, funding, and insurance.
The Absolute Rules	NO lifting. NO transferring. NO carrying. NO catching falls with the body. NO hands-on personal care. NO administering medication. Never — not "just this once," not even if the client or family asks.
Why the rules exist	Client safety, staff safety, scope of vendored service, insurance and liability, and protecting the client's assessed support plan so real needs get properly funded.
DO / DON'T scenarios	Side-by-side examples for mobility, falls and transfers; personal care and meals; carrying, errands, and medication — what is within the ILS role and what is outside it.
If a client falls	The five-step protocol: don't lift — assess verbally — call 911 if injured or unsure — coach self-recovery only if uninjured and able — report and document every fall, same day.
Saying no kindly	Scripts for declining out-of-scope requests, and the Three-Step Redirect: decline warmly, offer what you CAN do, report the request to your supervisor the same day.
Workers' compensation	No-fault insurance required of every California employer: medical care, wage replacement, protection from retaliation (Labor Code §132a), and the requirement of honest reporting.
Injured at work: six steps	1) Get medical help first. 2) Tell your supervisor immediately. 3) Complete the DWC-1 claim form (provided within one working day). 4) Get treatment — up to $10,000 authorized while the claim is reviewed. 5) Follow through on care and restrictions. 6) File an incident report.

The role in one sentence	"I teach and coach independent living skills. I do tasks WITH clients, never FOR them — and never with my body as the tool."
---------------------------------	--

Attestation

By signing below, I attest that:

1. I personally attended and participated in the training session on the date written above, and every topic listed on this form was presented during that session.
2. I had the opportunity to ask questions, and my questions were answered to my satisfaction.
3. I understand the material presented, including that my role is to teach, coach, and support independent living skills — I am not a caregiver, and I will never lift, transfer, or carry a client, catch a fall with my body, provide hands-on personal care, or administer medication.
4. I understand the fall protocol and agree to follow it, including same-day supervisor notification and an incident report for every fall.
5. I understand how to report a work-related injury, including my right to receive a DWC-1 claim form within one working day and my protection from retaliation under California Labor Code §132a.
6. I agree to comply with these policies, to decline out-of-scope requests respectfully, and to report such requests and any unmet client needs to my supervisor the same day.
7. I understand that violating the scope-of-service rules may result in disciplinary action, up to and including termination, and that I should ask my supervisor before acting whenever I am unsure.

Employee signature: Date:

Trainer/Supervisor signature: _____ Date: _____

File the signed original in the employee's personnel file. Provide a copy to the employee.