

MY LIFE SERVICES

Attendance, Call-Outs, and Missed Sessions

New Hire Onboarding Guide | Independent Living Skills Program

This policy covers calling out, arriving late, and client cancellations: who to contact, how soon, and what has to be documented before the day ends.

1. Calling Out: Timeline, Method, and What to Say

Timeline and method

- Minimum notice. Call out at least 2 hours before your scheduled start time. In a sudden emergency, notify your supervisor as soon as reasonably possible.
- Who to contact. The assigned supervisor for the client whose session is affected. A phone call is required. If it is unanswered, leave a voicemail and follow it with a brief text or email.
- Email the attendance inbox. Every call-out must also be emailed. See the details below.

Your call-out is not complete until your supervisor confirms it.

Leaving a voicemail starts the process, but it does not finish it. If you do not hear back within a reasonable timeframe, keep attempting contact until you get confirmation.

What to tell your supervisor

- Client name and the session date and time.
- A brief reason for the call-out.
- Whether you plan to use PTO for the missed hours.
- Whether you think the session can be rescheduled within the pay period or week.

The attendance email

The phone call and the email are both required. One does not replace the other.

- Send to: mylifeservices.attendance@gmail.com
- CC: Kristy Hatt, Assistant Program Manager (Kristyhattmylifeservices@gmail.com)
- In the body, state: the date of the shift you are calling out for, whether you are claiming sick or PTO hours for that shift, and how many hours you are claiming.

2. Arriving Late

The app asks you for a reason whenever you clock in or out more than 5 minutes from your scheduled time. What happens after that depends on how far off you are.

Late by 15 minutes or less

- Clock in and give a reason when the app prompts you.
- Contact Gabriel Miranda yourself and explain why you were running late.
- Gabriel approves and amends the time back to the regularly scheduled time. He will not change it automatically, so nothing happens until you reach out.

Late by more than 15 minutes

- Clock in late anyway. Your clock-in is what shows you are with the client. Do not skip it or adjust it yourself.
- Contact your supervisor the same day and explain why you were late. Waiting until the next day makes approval less likely and means the reason you give has to be investigated further.
- Your supervisor decides. They will verify what they can, decide whether they accept your reason, and approve or deny paying you for the full scheduled time.
- If it is approved, your supervisor contacts Gabriel to make the change and confirms it was done before payroll.

Past 15 minutes, the request has to come from your supervisor.

For a delay of 15 minutes or less, you contact Gabriel yourself. Beyond that, only your supervisor can ask Gabriel to change your time. A request that comes straight from staff will not be approved.

3. What Happens on the Supervisor's End

Knowing what your supervisor has to do next explains why they ask what they ask. It is not a test of your reason for calling out; it is about keeping the client covered.

Required supervisor questions

Supervisors must ask and document the following:

- Can the scheduled session be rescheduled without causing a disruption for the client?
- Does the client have emergent needs that should not be missed, such as a medical appointment or court date, or would canceling leave them without food or required medications?
- Is the client okay with canceling today's session?

Client communication

The supervisor calls the client to:

- Inform them of the schedule change.
- Confirm they agree to cancel or reschedule.
- Screen for emergent needs or gaps in basic necessities such as food, medications, or urgent appointments. Client consent and any needs identified are documented.

Coverage and escalation

- If the client has needs that must be met during the scheduled session:
 - The supervisor contacts Kristy to find coverage.
 - The supervisor may step in to cover if needed.
 - Coverage details are confirmed with both the client and the staff member.
- If no needs are identified and the session can be rescheduled:
 - Proceed with the rescheduling and documentation steps in Section 4.

4. Scheduling and Documentation

Start with your supervisor. Once you have spoken to them, and you are not claiming sick or PTO hours, the shift is handled in one of two ways. Both stay available whether or not you plan to reschedule.

Option	What it involves
Delete the shift	Send the attendance email, then delete the shift from your QSP schedule.
Change to ILS Misc	Leave the shift and change the service type to ILS Misc. Requires your supervisor's approval.

If your supervisor approves ILS Misc

- The shift stays on your schedule as ILS Misc and the time is recorded. You are sent home or on to your next shift.
- There is no extra work to make up the hours. Filling scheduled hours with other work is only an option when the client cancels. See Section 7.

Your note must include:

- Supervisor contacted. The name of the supervisor you spoke with.
- PTO. Whether PTO will be used for the missed hours.
- Reason. A brief reason for the change. Do not include private health details.

Rescheduling

- Reschedule the session within the pay period or week when possible.
- If the hours cannot be rescheduled and you need hours, your supervisor must inform Kristy so alternate client work can be assigned.

Everything gets finished the same day.

All schedule updates and notes are completed the same day, by both staff and supervisors. Fixing an entry on the day it happened is routine. Fixing it weeks later during payroll is not.

5. Emergencies, Compliance, and Professionalism

Emergencies and exceptions

- In a sudden emergency, notify your assigned supervisor as soon as it is safe to do so.
- Supervisors prioritize client safety and urgent needs first, then complete the documentation.

Compliance and consequences

- You are required to contact your assigned supervisor to report any session absence or change.
- Failure to contact your assigned supervisor to report a session absence may result in a written warning, consistent with the organization's progressive discipline policy.

When call-outs or lateness become a pattern

- Occasional call-outs and delays happen. Repeated ones are a red flag and will be reviewed.
- You will be asked to come into the office so we can look at why it keeps happening and rework your schedule so that it stops. The purpose of that meeting is to solve the problem.
- If it continues after that, it becomes a disciplinary matter, consistent with the organization's progressive discipline policy.

Privacy and professionalism

- Share only the information necessary to explain the reason for the call-out.
- Keep all documentation factual, timely, and free of judgment.

6. Emergent vs. Non-Emergent Needs

Category	Examples	What it means for the session
Emergent	Same-day medical appointment, court date, no food, medication pickup due today.	The session cannot simply be canceled. The supervisor arranges coverage or steps in.
Non-emergent	Routine housekeeping, non-urgent errands that can be rescheduled.	With client consent, cancel or reschedule and change the session to ILS Misc.

7. When a Client Cancels

Your supervisor confirms the cancellation with the client, then decides what happens to your hours.

What to do

- Notify your supervisor immediately. Do not wait until the end of the day or the end of the shift.
- Your supervisor will call the client to confirm that they canceled.

If a client asks you to leave early

- Clock out when you actually leave. Do not stay clocked in for time you did not work.
- Write it in your Daily Service Note (DSN). Note that the client asked you to finish the shift early.
- Contact your supervisor, who calls the client to confirm and then asks Gabriel to add an ILS Misc shift for the remainder of the time that was approved. Staff cannot make that request directly.

How your hours are handled

In either situation above, if you reported it in time, your case supervisor decides which of these applies, and may consult Kristy.

Outcome	What it means
Alternative work	Other work for the scheduled hours: another program client, or admin tasks.
Reschedule	The session is rescheduled and you work those hours later.
Paid in full	You are paid for the full shift and the hours are not rescheduled.

Never delete a shift on your own or claim hours you did not work.

Failing to report a cancellation, removing a shift without your supervisor's confirmation, or recording a session as though it happened will result in disciplinary action, up to and including termination. Reporting promptly is what makes the outcomes above available to you.

Repeated cancellations by the same client

- First. Notify your supervisor. They confirm with the client and decide about the hours.
- Second. Notify a supervisor that you are experiencing challenges with client compliance.
- Third. A supervisor must be informed. They will contact the client and the service coordinator for support, and may schedule a meeting to determine whether the client is appropriate for ILS services.

Following these procedures is essential to the quality of our services. This policy is a companion to your job description and the ILS Trainer Onboarding Guide. Where it differs from company policy, company policy controls.
